Our Favorite Hand Sanitizers

November 09, 2009

The best way to stay germ-free is to wash your hands regularly. But when soap and a sink are nowhere in sight, hand sanitizer is the next best thing. These are the favorites around our office (and handbags):

"I like the Bath & Body Works PocketBac Deep Cleansing Hand Gels. They're super-small—and I just happen to find miniature things adorable—come in a variety of scents, and only cost $1.50! Plus, they don't leave your hands cracked and dry, thanks to skin-soothing vitamins." —Amy Keller Laird, beauty director

"I love the Noodle & Boo Instant Hand Sanitizer. Since I'm pregnant (and since I'd rather not get swine flu), I've become obsessed with sanitizing my hands constantly. I don't like the alcohol-y smell you're usually left with—but this one smells great, soft and powdery." —Alyssa Hertzog, beauty news editor.

"I keep Herban Essentials Lemon Towelettes in my bag. They're individually wrapped, so you can fit several of them into even the tiniest clutch or your coat pocket. They're alcohol-free, so they're not drying. And I love the lemon scent." —Victoria Kirby, beauty editor.

"I keep the 15-ounce pump of Frais Hand Sanitizer on my desk to use throughout the day, and I carry around the miniatures in my bag. It's great for when I don't have time to wash my hands, plus, the scent is lemon-y, but not too overpowering." —Jessica Prince, editorial assistant.
