

be inspired GEAR & GADGETS

Self serve ▶

Being a brown thumb doesn't mean you have to turn to store-bought herbs. Grow garden-fresh varieties easily in your very own kitchen with a Baby Grobal self-watering pot. The small planter draws water from a reservoir chamber to the Grobal soil to hydrate plants on its own. All you have to do is keep an eye on the water level indicator to see when your buds need more H₂O. $15, grobworld.com

Clean as a whistle ▲

Fraix Everyday Hand Sanitizer will help ward off bugs during cold and flu season without turning your hands into the Gobi Desert. Killing 99.9 percent of germs, this hand sanitizer actually moisturizes with eight essential oils. $7 for 1.7 fl oz, fraislux.com

Clean Eating

loves

Adorn your kitchen with a few of the best buys the CE team can't live without right now.

Modern to a tea ▼

A guaranteed conversation starter each time you sit down to tea, the Sorapot will embellish your table like a piece of modern sculpture. This new-age teapot will take steeping loose-leaf tea to a new level of ogling. Original Brushed style, $200, sorapot.com

Pushing up plastic

The late winter weather doesn't mean that you can't have a vivid green plant at the center of your kitchen table – even if it is made of melamine! The Amazing Salad Plant is a set of salad serving utensils made to appear like the leaves of a potted plant when standing upright in its "flower pot." Plus, the pot can be used to mix and serve dressings. $24.50, delight.com

Grate expectations ▶

Dean & DeLuca's Microplane Grater will allow you to garnish your Clean Eating recipes like a five-star chef, creating extra-fine shreds of nutmeg, garlic and citrus zest. $13.50, deandeluca.com

